"The greatest of climate change is its large scale. It can't be solved by voluntary individual responses. It requires an economy-wide solution. Let one that shifts the real carbon value of the economy."
— Peter Barnes

"The climate change challenge has to be shared. The developing countries need more support and opportunities to develop and use clean energy. Because if the current situation continues, then the world will not be able to handle this burden."
— Lisa Jackson

"Can we really be so ungrateful as a country to refuse to accept our responsibility for global warming when the United States is the largest contributor to this problem?"
— Blythe Danner

"The United States depends on non-renewable resources. It requires constant pumping of money into the economy to subsidize the fossil fuels industry. The fossil fuel industry is the largest contributor to global warming. It's time to take a stand and support clean energy. It's time to take a stand and support clean energy."
— Ryan Danner

"Climate change is not just another trend. It's the fact that, somewhere, we witness all other trends. The only hope lies in all the countries of the world coming together around a common global project to reverse the earth with clean energy. This is a path to peace — peace among nations and peace between people and nature."
— Rose Gellman

"All across the world, increasingly dangerous weather patterns and devastating storms are already pulling us and to the brink of losing what we value or see climate change as real. Not only is it real, it's here, and the effects are going to be a frighteningly very great consequence. The more we act, the better."
— Wangari Maathai

"Global climate change is real and we have a limited time to change our behavior as a society with the consequences. We can do this by making small changes in our lives to better our voice to our governing bodies. As we always have in the case of the country, they should respond. And come."
— Wangari Maathai
